The paper appears aged and slightly discolored.

1917

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is written in a single column across approximately 12 lines. The script is dense and flowing, characteristic of early modern handwriting. The paper is aged and shows signs of wear, including two prominent dark circular holes or indentations. The text appears to be a continuous narrative or record, possibly related to a legal or administrative matter, given the formal nature of the script and the presence of the holes which might have been part of a binding system.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general survey of the subject, and to a discussion of the various theories which have been advanced to explain the origin of the universe. It is found that the most plausible theory is that the universe originated in a single point, and that it has since expanded outwards in all directions. This theory is supported by the fact that the light from distant stars is shifted towards the red end of the spectrum, which indicates that they are moving away from us. The expansion of the universe is also supported by the fact that the temperature of the cosmic background radiation is uniform in all directions, which indicates that the universe was once in a state of high temperature and density, and has since cooled down and expanded.
